Article Submission and Publication

Opinions with respect to antitrust laws frequently differ. Ideas and conclusions expressed in material contributed by others are not necessarily those of the Board of Editors, nor of the organization with which a particular author is affiliated.

Readers of The Antitrust Bulletin are invited to submit, to the appropriate Editor, manuscripts or material for publication. Editors' addresses and primary areas of responsibility are listed on the masthead. No charge is made to the author for submitting a manuscript or for publication of the article if accepted.

All articles accepted will be copyrighted by Federal Legal Publications, Inc., publishers of The Antitrust Bulletin. However, authors may use their work in books or other publications for which they are author or editor without fee provided they notify Federal Legal Publications of such use in writing.

The cover letter transmitting a manuscript must grant an exclusive right of first publication to The Antitrust Bulletin or the submission will not be considered. Note: Articles published to the Internet as "working papers" or as part of other electronic collections prior to acceptance by The Antitrust Bulletin are considered previously published materials. Every effort is made to provide a prompt decision regarding acceptance or rejection. Final publication decisions are made by the Editor-in-Chief. Manuscripts are submitted at the sender's risk and The Antitrust Bulletin assumes no responsibility for the return of material. No financial compensation is paid for articles published; however, a PDF formatted copy of your article will be sent to you for your personal use. Please do not post this PDF copy on any Web site for a period of six months following receipt. If, at any time, you send a copy of this PDF version to any individual or organization, it should be clearly marked "For personal use only and not for publication or resale unless specifically authorized by Federal Legal Publications, Inc."

Inquiries regarding current subscriptions, back issues, bound library copies, and reprints of individual articles should be sent directly to Customer Services, Att'n: Peggy Nudo, 39 Lakeview Road, Carmel, NY 10512 (845-228-5086; FAX: 845-225-2686). Changes in address should be sent 30 days prior to the date of the next issue since copies will not be forwarded nor duplicates provided. If a subscriber wishes his subscription discontinued at its expiration, notice to that effect should be sent to the publisher; otherwise it is assumed a continuation is desired.

FEDERAL LEGAL PUBLICATIONS CODE OF CONDUCT

NOTE: Federal Legal Publications adheres to, but is not a paid subscriber to the Code of Ethics developed by the Committee On Publication Ethics (COPE).

GENERAL DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE EDITOR-IN CHIEF AND EDITORS OF SPECIALIZED SUBJECT AREAS:

The editor-in-chief is finally responsible for articles published in this journal. All editors strive to select articles for publication that:

- display incisive thought, employ rigorous analysis, and advance legal or economic knowledge and scholarship;
- meet the reasonable needs and expectations of legal and economic communities of scholars and practitioners for domestic and international articles that advance knowledge in the specific subject areas of antitrust law, competition policy, and industrial organization economics;
- advance freedom of expression, maintain academic integrity, and apply high intellectual and scholarly standards;

Relations with the communities of legal and economic scholars and practitioners

Scholars and practitioners are invited to submit articles for review and consideration for publication. Submissions will be thoroughly reviewed to determine if standards of scholarship are appropriately met.

Readers will be informed about an author's sources of funded research and the role of funders in the author's research process. Relevant information regarding funded research will be disclosed in requisite articles.

Readers are encouraged to communicate with the editor-in-chief with questions, criticisms, or corrections of published articles. Readers will be invited to publish criticisms and/or corrections and each will be published in the discretion of the editor-in-chief.

Relations with authors

- Editors will take all reasonable steps to ensure the quality of the articles they recommend for publication.
- The editor-in-chief's final acceptance or rejection of an article for publication will be based solely on the article's substantive quality—the incisiveness of its thought, the rigor of its analysis, and the scholarliness of the legal or economic knowledge advanced—and whether the article meets the journal's then current needs for timely and topical articles on a particular subject area.

- Articles should be submitted to the editor with responsibility for the article's subject matter. That editor will review the substantive quality of the article and will, as the responsible editor deems, submit it for review by peers.
- Authors may appeal an editor's decision to the editor-in-chief who will promptly review it and inform the author of the final decision.
- Authors are informed of the journal's formal submission requirements that are uniform and consistent across specialized subject matters. Authors should refer or link to this code. A decision as to an article's substantive quality is made by the responsible editor and communicated to the editor-in chief who makes all final publication decisions.
- Editors and any successors will not reverse decisions to recommend publication unless serious problems are subsequently identified with a submission.

Relations with reviewers

- Editors will communicate guidance to peer reviewers on expectations regarding their substantive review.
- Editors will preserve peer reviewers' anonymity, and will not disclose an article, except to the reviewer, during the review process.

The peer-review process

Reviewers will be required to use as a basis for their review the professionally accepted quality and scholarly standards prevailing in their specialized area.

Editors will protect articles from disclosure, except as disclosed to reviewers, during the process and will promptly notify the author of the decision and its bases.

Complaints

- Editors will respond promptly to authors' complaints and will advise complainants to communicate any unresolved matters to the editor-in-chief.

Encouraging debate

- Cogent criticisms of published articles will be published unless editors have convincing reasons why they should not be.
- Authors of criticized articles will be given the opportunity to respond.
